

REACTION THE MDUDUZI MANANA SENTENCING.

13/11/2017

For Immediate Release.

#NotInMyNameSa has reluctantly accepted the sentencing of the convicted woman beater Mduduzi Manana. This is because we respect the rule of law and not because we see it as a befitting sentence for such a violent crime of grievous bodily harm to a helpless woman. The criminal Manana was found guilty on three counts of assault against a lady In Randburg earlier this year. He has in the entire process shown no remorse or signs of repentance, on the contrary Manana chose to rather rent crowds of young students who were supposed to be in class to come and support him.

#NotInMyNameSa rejects and condemns this action and this blatant show of disrespect to the victim and our justice system.

We further more want to commend all forward thinking citizens who came out from different organisations to come and support the victim and fair judicial process. We are encouraged by the sense of activism that has been instilled in our people regarding gender based violence in South Africa.

We call on Manana to take personal steps to rectify his behaviour and actions. He must do so away from the media spotlight and go for behaviour management classes. He should also publicly denounce any forms of violence towards women and children.

#NotInMyNameSa continues to be a voice of the voiceless.
